WICHITA AND DEEP WATER.

GALVESTON'S NEED FOR A GRAIN MARKET AT THIS POINT.

The interests which, properly considered, will make the greatest grain market west of the Mississippi River.

Of the vast amounts of grain that are annually exported from Baltimore and New York not a bushel is sold on a New York or Baltimore inspection or grade, but on the classifications fixed at Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis and other great inland centers. Wichita's delegation to the Deep Water banquet met with a most cordial reception, a reception that was marked, on the part of the business interests of Galveston, whose people clearly recognize the fact that the interests of Galveston as an exporting point and those of Wichita as an initial grain center, are not only mutual but as directly dependent upon each other as are St. Louis and New Orleans. Galveston sees that the chances for her grain export trade are naturally with Wichita, because at Wichita can be gathered more expeditiously and surely, for inspection and grading, the grain, the corn and wheat crops of Kansas, Western Missouri and of Nebraska, with a fair show in competing for the surplus of those of the Dakotas and the northwest, than at any other point west of the Missouri river.

The people of Galveston therefore not only showed the Wichita delegation marked attention but took the liveliest interest in their affairs, inquiring especially after the proposed elevator, expressing the hope that Wichita would be ready to handle all the grain that could find a paying export price by the time Galveston had her channel deepened sufficiently to float the foreign vessels engaged in that trade. They said that they realized that in all grain inspected at Wichita, Galveston would at least have an equal show with eastern export markets, while their ports would have little or no show for the grains that had reached the St. Louis and Chicago elevators.

In short, in an authorized standard grain inspection and elevator facilities at a point as far west as Wichita, lies Galveston's strongest guaranty of becoming a grain exporting port. At no other point could the great grain output of Kansas and Nebraska be concentrated so naturally for exportation as at Wichita. It is the only point with the necessary railway facilities, at which elevators can be erected that will compel Kansas City to handle the grain products of the west under competition. The only way by which Galveston can secure a percent of the grain that goes to Kansas City is in making Wichita a grain market equal to Kansas City. Galveston's demand and a Wichita inspection and grade will, combined, make Wichita just as good a market for all the grain of Kansas and Nebraska as is either Kansas City or St. Louis. The Santa Fe and Missouri Pacific managers have already answered Galveston that their railway systems could just as expeditiously and as cheaply concentrate the grain of western Missouri, of Nebraska and of Kansas at Wichita as at any other point.

There is another point favoring Wichita as a grain market, a factor, in fact, which, taken in connection with the Galveston route, ought to make Wichita as great a grain center, if not the greatest grain market in the west. Memphis and New Orleans and Mobile, all grain exporting points, labor under a disadvantage held against them in the Kansas City market, which is controlled in the interest of Chicago. All grain centered at Wichita would be readily and as cheaply as forwarded to Memphis or to Galveston or Chicago, and New Orleans and Memphis would both become buyers in this market because of its equal accessibility to them.

In short in these grain elevators and deep water propositions lies another great opportunity for Wichita. The more this matter is insisted upon the more clear will it become that Wichita's greatest present interest lies in the promptly securing of the proper facilities for handling, inspecting and grading grain. We want not only the elevator and the authorized inspection, but the capital and services of a company who in handling and fixing the grade of grain will be able by themselves, and through dealers who will employ their storage capacity to reach out over all the territory named. As soon as that which is handling the live stock of south Kansas, and doing the packing and jobbing of south Kansas, just as surely can she become the grain market of south Kansas. And once in the control of all the interests her field will begin to spread and widen and strengthen, each interest enlisting every other interest to reach farther and farther until we become in trade what we are geographically an important center equidistant from the exporting and importing points of the gulf of the lakes and of the Mississippi river.

SOUTHWESTERN TEACHERS' ANNUAL MEETING.
The meeting of the Southwestern Teachers' association will open this evening in Lewis academy with Dr. Winters' lecture "The Coming Men and Women." A full program will be rendered tomorrow, one of the most interesting features of which will be the debate between W. R. Payne of this city and Prof. Lowell Houshoush, of Harper, on the subject, "Would state uniformity of text books promote the best interests of our schools?" This question has of late received much attention throughout the state and will be fully and ably discussed by these gentlemen. Shaw's orchestra will give a grand concert tomorrow evening.

A large number of teachers in the adjoining counties have signaled their intention to be present at this meeting. All interested in the cause of education are cordially invited to attend.

MARKING.

At the residence of the groom's parents on South Water street at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday, November 27th, Henry O. Southwell and Laura C. Fisher, Rev. L. W. Bicknell of the West Side, officiating. The happy event was witnessed by a few intimate friends who joined the groom and his bride in discussing a very excellent supper that his mother had provided for the occasion.

MEETING OF RESUBMISSION EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

A. L. Allen, Esq., of Topeka, reached the city yesterday morning to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Republican Resubmission party yesterday. The committee met with closed doors in the afternoon at room 213 Sedgwick block. It was understood that the proceedings were not for publication but some of the members stated that they proposed to carry the war into Africa and would press the fight on the new legislature. They would like ask the legislature to allow the people an opportunity to vote on the prohibitory question, and it was believed by some that the present legislature would concede to the demands of the party. It was known that the some of the Alliance members were favorable to the proposition.

Concerning the situation, Chairman Allen stated yesterday: "We have been holding an important conference in your city today looking to an early resubmission of the prohibitory amendment. I cannot give you the full plans agreed upon, but I have no hesitancy in saying that all the indications are favorable to success with the coming legislature."

What is the feeling among Resubmission Republicans over the state since the late election? "They are all satisfied that we are winners in the contest. Information comes to our headquarters at Topeka from all parts of the state that we have not lost a single man; but on the other hand many Resubmission Republicans say now that resubmission must come and they will vote for no body who does not favor prohibition. The question is before us and must be met. Our demand is so just that it would seem no fair-minded representative to the legislature would think of denying it."

"We are asking to have the ballot placed in the hands of the people, nothing more. If the late contest was of any value to measure public sentiment it clearly demonstrates that a large majority of the people of Kansas are opposed to prohibition. For instance before the election the leading prohibition papers declared that we were between Kellogg and Ives was squarely drawn between prohibition and resubmission, and it was not denied. He was nominated on a resubmission platform and declared himself as such. The significant fact about the matter was that Mr. Kellogg ran about eleven thousand miles of his ticket, showing that the prohibition element in the People's party voted for Kellogg, instead of Ives, and even then Mr. Ives had 42,000 majority. We consider this a fair test of the resubmission vote of Kansas and for any political party to say that the people cannot be heard after this emphatic expression is political suicide."

Do you have any fears that the next legislature will not give us resubmission? "I have none. The People's party originated on the idea that the people should be heard and I feel certain they will not violate the fundamental principles of their organization by denying them a hearing at the ballot box. It matters not what the opinions of the members of the legislature may be on the merits of prohibition, but every one with any ideas of fairness would not hesitate to respect the wishes of the people, and trust them with this question. We are satisfied with the outlook and I find the members of the executive committee here in the best of spirits."

AFTER A WICHITA DINNER.

Wichita has for some time been referred to as the commercial center of the southwest as a result of the clearance showing of the business of each week. It has also been referred to as the hotel center of the southwest, having better hotel facilities than any other city in the state, and, in fact, according to the traveling public no better can be found in Kansas City or Denver. Owing to this fact many traveling parties, coming from the north, make it a point to reach Wichita Saturday evening, spending Sunday at Wichita hotels. They say they can get more accommodations than in any other town, since they make Wichita their Sunday home and headquarters. Last evening many of them arrived to spend Thanksgiving in the city. They expect to get more than the usual Thanksgiving accommodations, and in this it is thought they will not be mistaken. As a sample of what is on the menu for today the dinner at the Metropolitan, from 12:30 until 3 p. m., will "feature all" according to the following:

Menu:
New York oysters, Consommé Imperial, Roast Turkey, Potatoes, Gravy, Green Beans, Sweet Potatoes, Corn, Pumpkin Pie, Apple Pie, Coffee.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

Peerless lodge, No. 211, A. O. U. W., gave the initial ball of the season at their hall, corner of First and Main streets, last night. In every single particular this ball was a brilliant success. Richly dressed ladies, elegant gentlemen and the splendid hall all helped to make the event of the season. All spoke in the highest praise of this "Peerless Hall" and the satisfactory manner in which this inaugural ball was conducted. Not a little of the success is owing to the management of Messrs. J. M. Minick, Clerk and Minnie, three of the most active and tireless workers of the lodge. Their order, this Thanksgiving ball will be repeated at intervals during the coming season, and it is the intention to add additional interest as the season advances.

AMUSEMENTS.

This afternoon a family matinee will be given at the opera house where "Running Wild" will be presented. The prices have been reduced, so go and take the little ones. It will do you good to hear them laugh and "Running Wild" is said to be extremely funny. Plenty of music-singing and dancing. At the matinee the performance will begin at 2:30. This time has been set that those desiring to attend will not be hurried with their Thanksgiving dinner. Prices for the matinee will be 25, 50 and 75 cents. Children admitted to any part of the house free.

COMMERCIAL VISITORS.

The Commercial Club of Kansas City Makes Short Stop—Received at Board of Trade and by the Commercial Club.

On Tuesday the Board of Trade wired an invitation to the Commercial club at Kansas City to make a stop at Wichita. The club was down in Texas, having left Kansas City on the 19th inst. for a trip in Northern Texas and the Indian Territory. The club had not intended to come north by way of Wichita, but on receiving the invitation it was accepted, and in answer stated that they would reach Wichita at 6:30 last evening. An effort was made to get them here before they left, but the club, hoping they would have a chance to see something of the city before dark. The Santa Fe men said they would try and make better time and the special train might arrive by 5 p. m., but they were unable to shorten the time, and so announced at noon yesterday.

The board of trade selected the following gentlemen as a committee of reception to meet the distinguished commercial visitors at the depot: George L. Rouse, H. L. Pierce, M. M. Murdock, A. W. The representatives of the press were Richard Meador, of the Kansas City Journal; T. W. Parry, of the Kansas City Times; A. H. Russell, of the Kansas City Globe, and W. W. Damon, of the Kansas City Star.

After reaching the Board of Trade rooms President George L. Rouse presented Mayor Clement, who extended a welcome to the visitors. He assured them that they had conferred a great honor by stopping in the city. They were representative men of a representative city and Wichita had gained an inspiration from Kansas City.

Col. J. M. Patterson, president of the Commercial club, in response, said that in the trip of seven days in northern Texas and the territory, they had seen many prosperous towns and cities and they had found Wichita a wonderful city, marvelous in its growth and population and business. They would like to remain and see the city in daylight. He was unable to stay longer, but he called upon Col. J. G. Stone, who said that on reaching Kansas they had felt like they were getting back home, and the activity around Wichita made them think of Kansas City. The party had visited many energetic towns and had tasted the waters of the various towns. Some of the crowd seemed to doubt this statement, but the speakers were allowed to proceed. Continuing he said that Kansas City, Mo., would like to be picked up tenderly and put down in Kansas. Kansas had made Kansas City.

The visitors were then escorted to the rooms of the Coronado club and taken in charge by the reception committee, consisting of W. W. Johnston, Jr., W. A. Smith, W. H. Ford, J. G. Stone, F. E. Logan, assisted by a number of the members of the club. An hour was spent most pleasantly in making new acquaintances and talking over questions that most concerned business men. By way of amusement Will Collins was induced to engage the piano and sing a number of taking songs. He was most liberally applauded. At 3:45 President Patterson announced that it was time for them to leave for their train, and he thanked the committee for the most attention and assured that the party had never been given a more cordial welcome. He complimented the club rooms most highly and extended an invitation to the members of Coronado club and Board of Trade to come to Kansas City, and while they were not a social club, they would try and find some sociability around the town.

What is Catarrh

Catarrh is an inflammation of the mucous membrane, and may affect the head, throat, lungs, bladder, etc. It is a disease of the head, and is the most common of all diseases of the head. It is a disease of the head, and is the most common of all diseases of the head. It is a disease of the head, and is the most common of all diseases of the head.

Impure Blood

Its local symptoms are a sense of fullness and heat in the forehead, stiffness in the jaw and back part of the throat, and a disagreeable discharge from the nose. When the disease gains a firm hold on the system, it becomes chronic, and is then exceedingly dangerous. The eyes become inflamed, and red, and the skin is covered with a scaly eruption. It is a disease of the head, and is the most common of all diseases of the head.

Is the Remedy

For this ever increasing malady. It attacks at once the source of the disease by purifying and circulating the blood, which in passing through the blood vessels purifies the system, and removes all impurities from the blood, and is the most common of all diseases of the head.
